

Fionnuala Walravens

Campaigner, Environmental Investigation Agency

Biography

Fionnuala is a campaigner for EIA's Global Environmental Campaign. She is a leading authority on the inter-linkages between ozone and climate policies. She has written several reports, press articles and papers on the climate change impacts of HFCs. She is a strong advocate for environmentally friendly natural refrigeration and air-conditioning solutions. She studied at University College London where she graduated with a B.Sc (hons) and has a Masters of Research from Roehampton University, London.

The UN endorsed Environmental Investigation Agency is one of a handful of NGOs working on linkages between ozone and climate and has been calling for a global HFC phase out since 2007.
